Publications Assistance Program (PAP)
1998-99 Activity Report

1) Background

Through the Publications Assistance Program the federal government subsidizes the cost of mailing some periodical publications, via Canada Post, to subscribers within Canada. Special rates are also funded by the Department of Canadian Heritage for exchanging books between libraries within Canada.

Although the Publications Assistance Program has changed significantly over the years, its existence dates back to the 1800s. It was briefly called the Publications Distribution Assistance Program but is still widely referred to as the "Postal Subsidy Program." For many years, funded postal rates were available to virtually all periodicals and newspapers as well as books, and no distinctions were made as to type, origin, or whether recipients paid to receive publications or not. Eventually, special rate categories and eligibility criteria were established.

Responsibility for the general policy governing the subsidies was transferred to the Minister of Communications in 1979 while program administration remained with Canada Post. By the mid-1980s more than $200 million were being invested annually to reduce the costs of distributing eligible publications to Canadian readers. At the end of the decade, there were over 8,000 publications benefitting from the Program. As a result of a severe (50%) reduction in funding in 1990, the criteria for eligibility were narrowed. Exclusions included daily newspapers, large local weekly newspapers, controlled circulation magazines, all mailers of books except libraries, and foreign magazines no matter where they were printed. The objective of the restructuring was to focus remaining funds on Canadian-owned and -controlled paid circulation publications.

In 1996 the Department of Canadian Heritage assumed responsibility for administration of the Program. After consultations with the periodical publishing industry, the Publications Assistance Program was launched in the spring of 1997. In order to ensure consistent application of eligibility criteria, all beneficiaries were required to re-register.

Concurrently, in March 1996, the legality of the postal subsidy was challenged before a World Trade Organization panel. As the result of an appeal of the panel's decision by the United States, the Publications Assistance Program had to be compliant with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade by October 1998. The Program was changed from a preferential mailing rate to direct subsidy through the establishment of separate accounts at Canada Post for each registered title.

2) Program Objectives

The principal objectives of the Publications Assistance Program are:

- to encourage the affordable distribution of certain printed Canadian cultural products to Canadian readers at comparable costs;
- to ensure small community weekly newspapers are able to continue the important role they play in rural Canada;
- to support minority official language and ethnic weekly newspapers so they remain a vital element in promoting Canada's cultural diversity; and,
- to provide access to those readers who, due to their geographic location, or physical limitation, do not have access to a public library by supporting the distribution of library books to such readers.

3) Program Description and Operation

Now administered solely within the Department of Canadian Heritage, the Publications Assistance Program provides postal subsidies to eligible Canadian-owned and -controlled paid circulation publications that are mailed in Canada for delivery in Canada, including: periodicals (magazines and journals); small community, minority official language, ethnic, and national and regional weekly newspapers; and commercial newsletters.

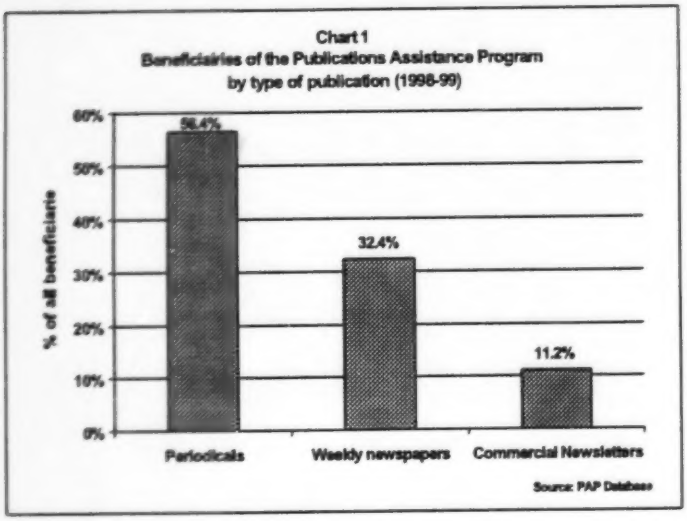
To be eligible, publications must meet certain requirements (outlined in detail in the Applicant's Guide, available on the departmental website or in hard copy). Key elements of these criteria include ownership, circulation, editorial and advertising content:

- Canadian-owned and -controlled;
- paid circulation to bona fide subscribers and single copy sales comprise at least 50% of total circulation;
- advertising does not exceed an average of 70% of total publication space;
- a significant portion of original material is produced by Canadians; and,
- commercial newsletters must be published for that purpose on a regular cycle.

With the administrative changes put in place to ensure General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade compliance, funded postal rates were converted to direct subsidies effective October 30, 1998. As a result, each time a publisher mails a registered publication, the total commercial cost of the mailing is calculated by Canada Post along with the amount of subsidy to which eligible copies are entitled. The subsidy amount is deducted from the title's account and the difference is paid by the publisher. In 1998-1999, it meant, for example, that a publisher paid 8.1 cents to mail each of the first 10,000 eligible copies of a publication that weighed under 200 grams. The cost to publishers was slightly more for heavier publications and for copies exceeding the first 10,000 copies.

4) Program Results: 1998-1999

In 1998-99, a total of 1,338 periodical publications benefitted from the Program as well as those library books mailed at the Library Book Rate. For that year, the postal costs covered by the Department of Canadian Heritage amounted to $47.3 million.



In 1998-99, the total annual circulation of the publications registered in the Publications Assistance Program was more than 338 million copies. Of that total, more than 183 million copies (54%) were subsidized. The postal subsidy applies only to copies of an issue addressed to bona fide subscribers, newsstands and retailers in Canada.

In terms of number of registered publications, periodicals represent the largest category. They include general and special interest magazines as well as literary and scholarly journals. In 1998-99, as indicated in Chart 1, periodicals accounted for more than 56% of the publications that received assistance.

Weekly newspapers, which include small-community, national and regional, minority official language, and ethnic papers, accounted for 32% of the publications on the Program.

Finally, commercial newsletters represented 12% of all titles that received assistance from the Program.

Chart 2 shows the value of subsidies obtained by each category of publication. Periodicals received 79% ($37.4 million) of the subsidies while they represent 56% of all beneficiaries of the Program. Many magazines have a much larger circulation than small-community newspapers or commercial newsletters. In addition, the delivery costs of magazines is typically higher than the delivery costs of community newspapers. Magazines tend to be heavier and distributed nationally while community newspapers are usually lighter and distributed locally.

The subsidized postal rates are available to publications originating from every region in the country, but the majority of them (more than 62%) come from the provinces of Ontario and Quebec (see Chart 3).

In 1998-99, the $47.3 million invested in the Publications Assistance Program by the Department of Canadian Heritage meant that every week and every month, millions of publications were mailed to Canadian readers at a reduced postal rate. The first beneficiaries of the Program are the publishers, as the postal subsidy significantly reduces the cost of mailing their publications to subscribers. But ultimately, the Program also benefits Canadian readers of these publications through more affordable subscription rates.

Annexes 1, 2 and 3 list all publications that benefit from the Publications Assistance Program as of December 10, 1999.

Programme d'aide aux publications (PAP)
Rapport d'activités 1998-1999

1) Contexte

Par le truchement du Programme d'aide aux publications et par l'intermédiaire de Postes Canada, le gouvernement fédéral subventionne les coûts d'envoi postaux de certaines publications périodiques livrées aux abonnés canadiens. Des tarifs spéciaux sont également subventionnés par le ministère du Patrimoine canadien pour les échanges de livres entre bibliothèques au Canada.

Le Programme d'aide aux publications, qui remonte aux années 1800, a beaucoup changé au cours des années. Nommé Programme d'aide à la distribution des publications durant une courte période, on l'appelle encore fréquemment le « Programme du subside postal ». Pendant de nombreuses années, pratiquement tous les périodiques, journaux et livres ont profité de tarifs postaux subventionnés, sans distinction quant à la catégorie ou à l'origine de la publication ou au fait qu'elle soit payée ou non par le destinataire. Au fil des années, des catégories de tarifs spéciaux et des critères d'admissibilité ont été établis.

Le ministre des Communications devient responsable de la politique générale relative aux subventions en 1979, tandis que Postes Canada continue d'administrer le Programme. Au milieu des années 1980, plus de 200 millions de dollars sont investis annuellement pour réduire les frais d'envoi des publications admissibles aux lecteurs canadiens. À la fin de la décennie, plus de 8 000 publications bénéficient du Programme. À la suite d'une réduction importante du financement (50 pour 100) en 1990, les critères d'admissibilité sont resserrés. On a dû ainsi exclure les quotidiens, les grands hebdomadaires locaux, les revues à diffusion contrôlée, tous les expéditeurs de livres, sauf les bibliothèques, et les revues étrangères peu importe leur lieu d'impression. La restructuration visait à octroyer les fonds résiduels aux publications à tirage payé, de propriété et sous contrôle canadiens.

En 1996, le ministère du Patrimoine canadien a assumé la responsabilité de l'administration du Programme. Suite à des consultations avec des représentants de l'industrie de l'édition, le Programme d'aide aux publications est lancé au printemps 1997. Afin d'assurer une application uniforme des critères d'admissibilité, tous les bénéficiaires sont tenus de se réinscrire au Programme.

Simultanément, en mars 1996, la légalité des tarifs postaux préférentiels est contestée devant un comité de l'Organisation mondiale du commerce. À la suite d'un appel de la décision du comité par les États-Unis, le Programme d'aide aux publications est contraint de se conformer à l'Accord général sur les tarifs douaniers et le commerce en octobre 1998. Les tarifs postaux préférentiels du Programme sont convertis en subventions directes, par l'établissement de comptes distincts à Postes Canada pour chacun des titres enregistrés.

2) Objectifs du Programme

Les principaux objectifs du Programme d'aide aux publications sont les suivants :

- encourager la diffusion à un coût raisonnable de certains produits culturels canadiens aux lecteurs canadiens, à des prix comparables;

- veiller à ce que les petits journaux hebdomadaires puissent continuer de jouer un rôle important au sein des communautés rurales canadiennes;

- soutenir les journaux hebdomadaires de langue minoritaire officielle et les journaux hebdomadaires ethniques afin qu'ils demeurent un élément vital de la promotion de la diversité culturelle canadienne;

- permettre aux lecteurs qui, en raison de leur lieu de résidence ou d'une mobilité réduite, ne peuvent se rendre à une bibliothèque publique, d'avoir accès à ces services, en appuyant la distribution des livres de bibliothèques auprès de ces lecteurs.

3) Description et fonctionnement du Programme

Maintenant qu'il est administré entièrement par le ministère du Patrimoine canadien, le Programme d'aide aux publications offre des subventions postales aux publications admissibles à tirage payé, de propriété et sous contrôle canadiens qui sont postées et livrées au Canada. Ces publications sont, entre autres, des périodiques (revues et publications savantes); des journaux hebdomadaires de petites communautés, des journaux hebdomadaires de langue minoritaire officielle, des journaux hebdomadaires ethniques, des journaux hebdomadaires nationaux et régionaux et des bulletins commerciaux.

Pour être admissibles, les publications doivent satisfaire à certaines exigences (explications détaillées disponibles dans le Guide d'enregistrement du candidat sur le site Web du Ministère ou sur copie papier). Les éléments clés de ces critères incluent la propriété, le tirage, le contenu rédactionnel et l'espace publicitaire :

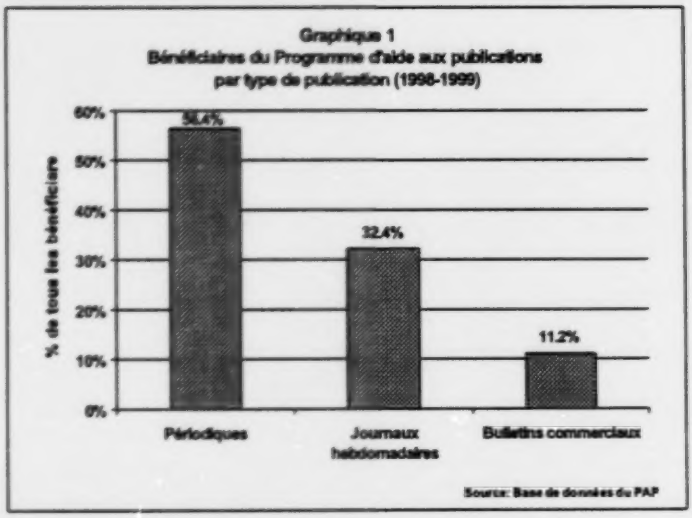
- de propriété et sous contrôle canadiens;
- au moins 50 % de la diffusion totale d'une publication est constitué de ventes à des abonnés véritables et de ventes au numéro;
- l'espace publicitaire ne dépasse pas en moyenne 70 % de l'espace total de la publication;
- une portion importante de matériel original est produite par des Canadiens et des Canadiennes;
- les bulletins commerciaux doivent avoir une vocation commerciale et être publiés suivant un cycle régulier.

Les changements administratifs mis en oeuvre pour assurer la conformité avec l'Accord général sur les tarifs douaniers et le commerce ont permis de convertir les tarifs postaux subventionnés en subventions directes à partir du 30 octobre 1998. Par conséquent, chaque fois qu'un éditeur poste une publication inscrite, le coût total de l'envoi, basé sur les tarifs commerciaux en vigueur, est calculé par Postes Canada en même temps que le montant de la subvention versée pour les copies admissibles. Le montant de la subvention est déduit du compte du titre et la différence est payée par l'éditeur. En 1998-1999, par exemple, un éditeur payait 8,1 cents pour poster chacune des 10 000 premiers exemplaires admissibles d'une publication pesant moins de 200 grammes. Le coût était légèrement plus élevé pour les publications plus lourdes ainsi que pour les exemplaires excédant le nombre de 10 000.

4) Résultats du Programme : 1998-1999

En 1998-1999, un total de 1 338 périodiques, en plus des livres de bibliothèque, postés au tarif livre de bibliothèque, ont profité du Programme. Le ministère du Patrimoine canadien a payé des frais postaux s'élevant à 47,3 millions de dollars.

En 1998-1999, la diffusion totale annuelle des publications inscrites au PAP s'est chiffrée à plus de 338 millions d'exemplaires. De ce nombre, plus de 183 millions de copies (54 %) ont été subventionnées. La subvention postale s'appliquait seulement aux exemplaires d'un numéro adressés à des abonnés véritables, à des kiosques à journaux et à des détaillants au Canada.



En ce qui concerne le nombre de publications inscrites, les périodiques représentent la catégorie la plus importante. Ils comprennent les revues d'intérêt général et les revues spécialisées, de même que les publications littéraires et savantes. En 1998-1999, comme l'indique le graphique 1, les périodiques représentaient plus de 56 % des publications ayant obtenu de l'aide.

Les journaux hebdomadaires, qui comprennent les journaux des petites communautés, les journaux nationaux et régionaux, les journaux de langue officielle minoritaire et les journaux ethniques, représentaient 32 % des publications qui ont profité du Programme.

Enfin, les bulletins commerciaux représentaient 12 % de tous les titres ayant obtenu l'aide du Programme.

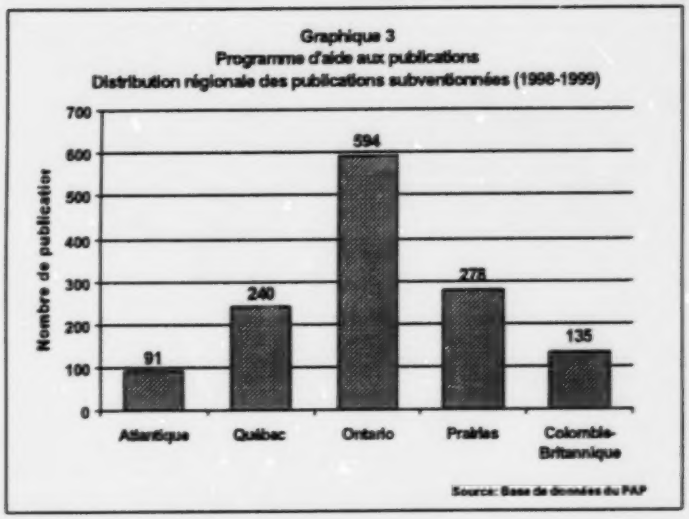
Le graphique 2 montre la valeur des subventions obtenues par chacune des catégories de publication. Les périodiques reçoivent 79 % (37,4 millions de dollars) des subventions alors qu'ils représentent 56 % de tous les bénéficiaires du Programme. Un grand nombre de revues ont un tirage beaucoup plus considérable que les journaux des petites communautés ou les bulletins commerciaux. De plus, le coût de livraison des revues est d'ordinaire supérieur à celui des journaux communautaires. Les revues, généralement plus lourdes, sont distribuées à l'échelle nationale, tandis que les journaux communautaires, habituellement plus légers, sont distribués localement.



Les publications provenant de toutes les régions du pays peuvent se prévaloir des subventions postales; cependant, la majorité d'entre elles (plus de 62 %) proviennent des provinces de l'Ontario et du Québec (voir le graphique 3).

En 1998-1999, les 47,3 millions de dollars investis dans le Programme d'aide aux publications par le ministère du Patrimoine canadien ont permis de poster chaque semaine et chaque mois des millions de publications aux lecteurs canadiens à un tarif postal réduit. Les éditeurs sont les premiers bénéficiaires du Programme, étant donné que la subvention postale diminue considérablement le coût d'envoi des publications aux abonnés. Mais en définitive, le Programme est aussi avantageux pour les lecteurs canadiens qui peuvent ainsi obtenir un abonnement à ces publications à un prix plus abordable.

Les annexes 1, 2 et 3 dressent la liste de toutes les publications qui bénéficient du Programme d'aide aux publications en date du 10 décembre 1999.
